RE: Resources Listing

By way of discussing "what's out there" I have compiled the following brief list of "resources" that have been useful to us in the past to describe our position or state the facts of the science. It is unfortunately not all inclusive, there are undbubtedly some things I have overlooked, but it will give you an idea of existing documentation of the issues and where to go to get information.

Someone in your group will know where to find each of these. (If not, ask.)
